MassDEP was contacted by ATSDR seeking assistance in communicating with the City of Westfield regarding potentially performing an exposure assessment related to PFAS exposure in the City. At least three of the City's public drinking water wells have been impacted by PFAS stemming from historic activities at Barnes Air National Guard.

ATSDR recently received funding to perform such assessments in eight communities whose drinking water contamination has been linked to current or former military sites. ATSDR is seeking additional information as part of the process in selecting the final 8 sites—they are apparently reviewing approximately 20 sites. They are seeking additional information to improve their understanding of the water system and how it operates (they are seeking the information by July 20th).

MassDEP offered to contact the City's water department to let them know of this request, and to participate in a conference call with ATSDR next week. MassDEP will first contact the Mayor's office and will also contact Barnes Air National Guard base to make sure they are aware of this potential.
